The Aura House

Concept No. 01

WHAT IF HERMÈS CALLED US?

A wellness room for a Paris house, built in India.

brands.theaurahouse.co

The house began in Paris in 1837, making harnesses for horses. Almost two centuries on, one artisan still makes each bag from start to finish, by hand.

NOT A POP-UP. NOT A LOGO ON A WALL.

So the room cannot be fast. It has to move at the speed of a hand.

BUILT ON ONE STITCH

The saddle stitch: two needles, one thread, pulled tight from both sides. Slower than a machine, and it outlasts one. We would build the whole evening on that rhythm. In, and out.

THE SADDLE STITCH

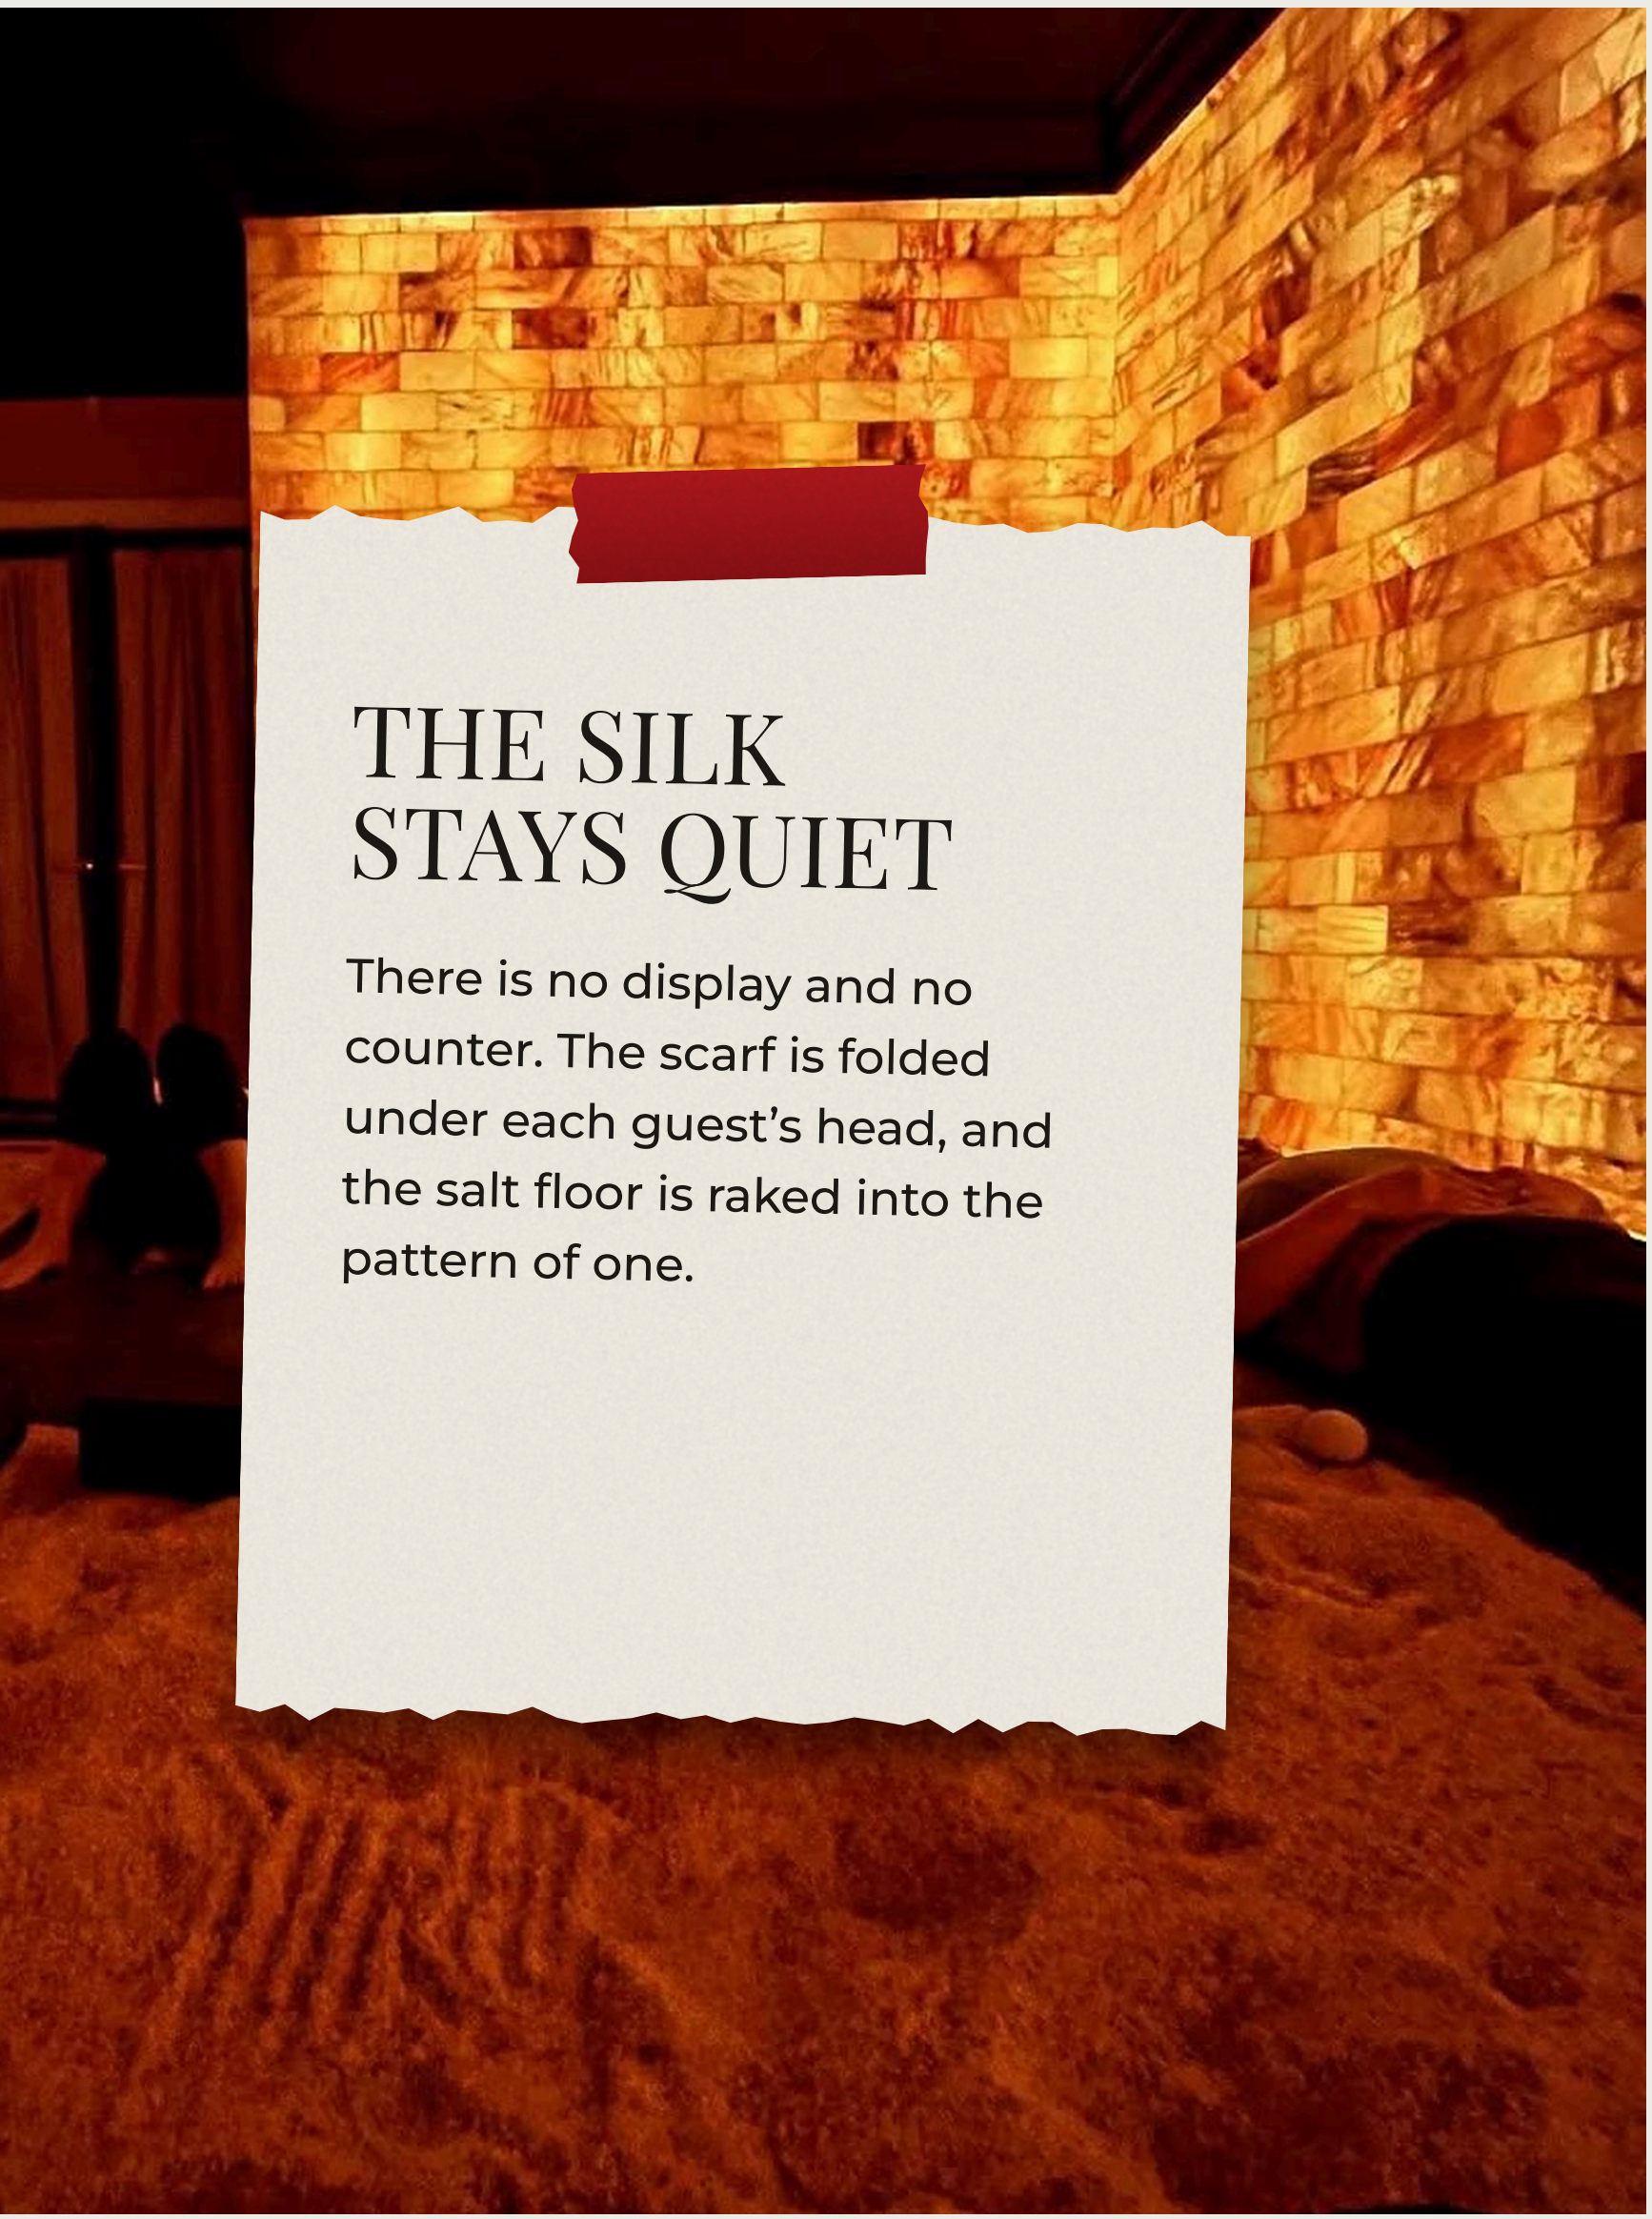

A ninety-minute ritual. Three rooms, twenty-four guests an evening.

ROOM ONE · 30 MIN

BREATHE, IN A ROOM OF SALT

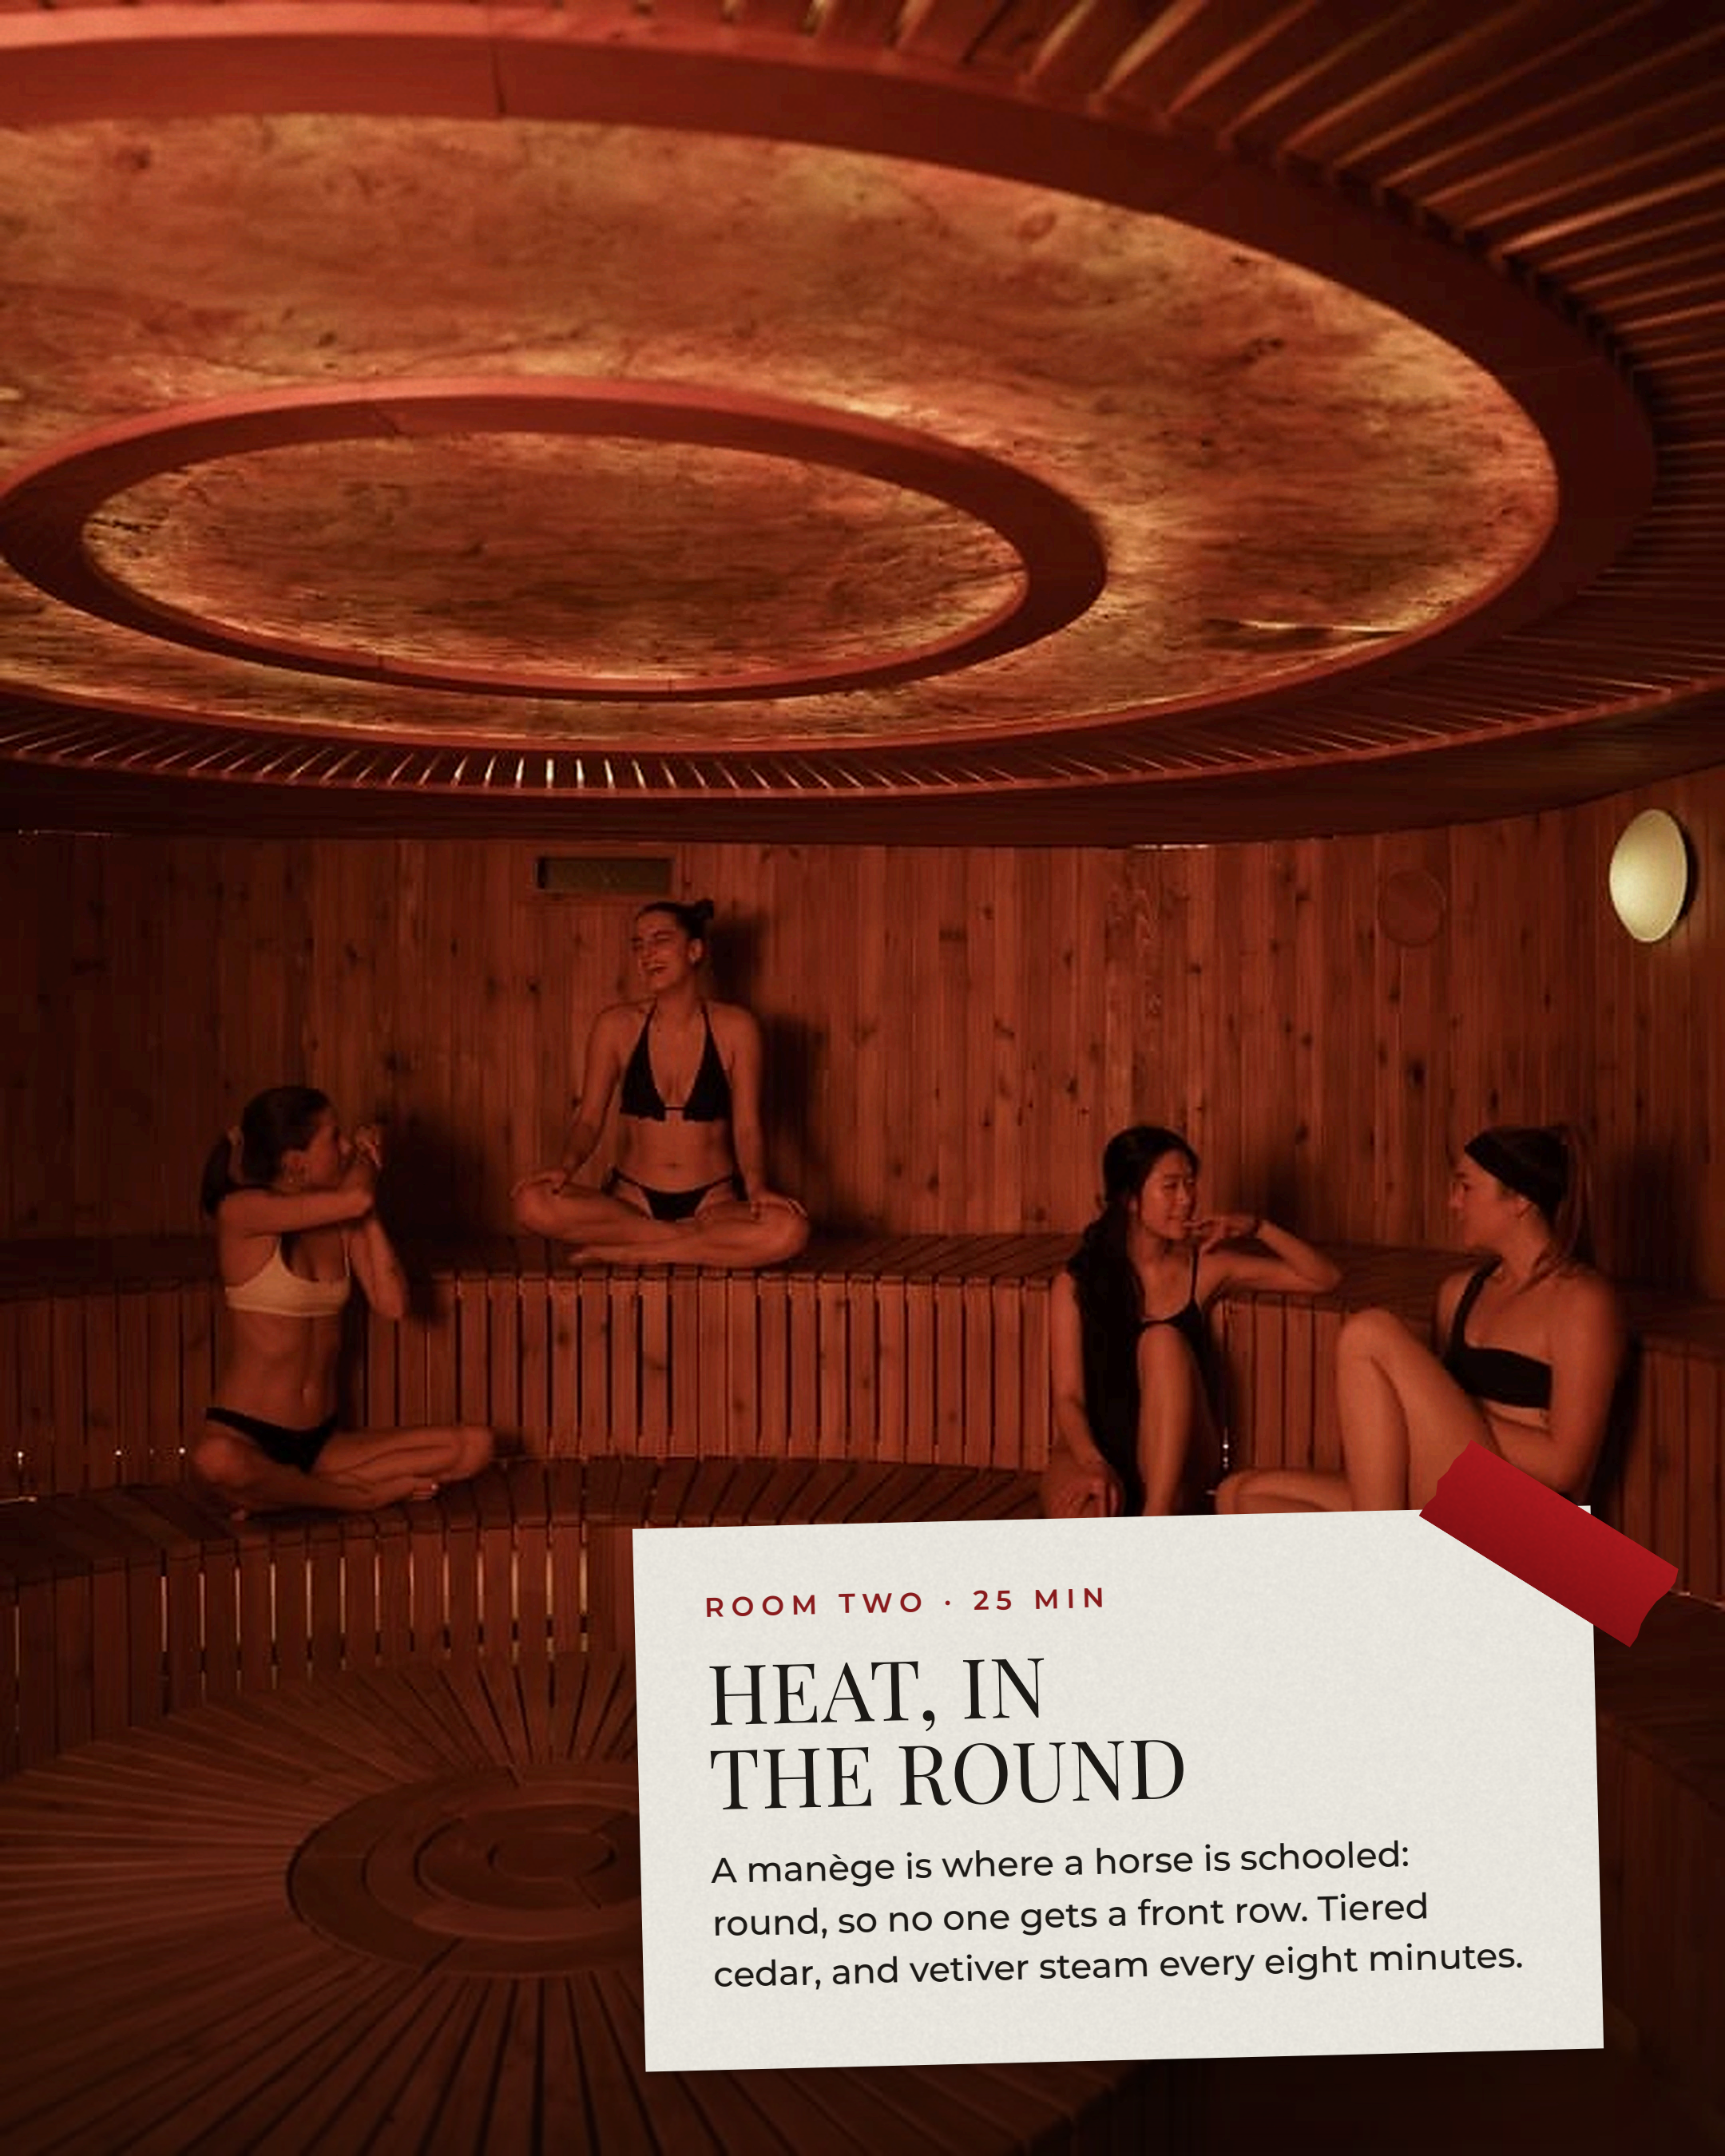

Walls of rock salt, lit from behind. Salt from the Rann of Kutch underfoot, raked by hand between sessions. Guided breathwork, lying down, in near silence.

THE SILK STAYS QUIET

There is no display and no counter. The scarf is folded under each guest’s head, and the salt floor is raked into the pattern of one.

ROOM TWO · 25 MIN

HEAT, IN THE ROUND

A manège is where a horse is schooled: round, so no one gets a front row. Tiered cedar, and vetiver steam every eight minutes.

ROOM THREE · 35 MIN

REST, AND NOTHING TO BUY

A low, quiet room. Silk wraps, cold tulsi, a slow cup of kahwa, and a sitar played almost too softly to hear. No catalogue. No one selling.

The product is in every room, and sold in none of them.

WHY INDIA

PARIS CODES.
INDIAN MATERIALS.

THE FLOOR

SALT

From the Rann of Kutch, Gujarat.

THE BENCHES

CEDAR

Deodar, the cedar of the Himalaya.

A Paris house should feel at home here, not on a visit.

HOW WE WOULD GO FORWARD

01 LISTEN

Time inside the house's codes, in India and Paris.

02 TRANSLATE

Scent, sound and pace, sourced here.

03 BUILD

One room, one team, end to end.

04 INVITE

24 guests an evening. The house writes the list.

05 FILM

Shot on the day, for its own channels.

06 RETURN

Monsoon in Mumbai. Winter in Delhi.

THE STEAM

VETIVER

Khus root, used to cool rooms across north India.

THE FILM

MARWARI

The curled-ear horse of Rajasthan.

WHAT THE HOUSE KEEPS

A ritual with a name. A guest list it wrote. A film of the evening.

COMMENT “ROOM”

and we’ll send you the full concept: the three rooms, the run of the evening, and what the house keeps.

This one is imagined. Yours doesn’t have to be.

A speculative concept by The Aura House. Not commissioned by, affiliated with or endorsed by Hermès. Images are reference only.